BHAIRABKUNDA

Bhairabkunda is a popular picnic spot in Udalguri District in the State of Assam, India. It is situated on the border of Bhutan and Arunachal Pradesh near the Bhutanese town of

The Jampani river originating in Bhutan and Bhairavi river merge here to form Dhansiri river. Dhansiri river is a major tributary of Brahmaputra river. An irrigation project was constructed on Dhansiri river at Bhairabkunda. A guided dam was constructed inside Bhutan for this project. The project is situated in Udalguri District within jurisdiction of Bodoland Territorial Area District (B.T.A.D) aimed to provide assured irrigation to an area of 41.683 hectares (103.00 acres) in five development blocks in Udalguri, Rowta, Kalajgaon Masbat and Bedhimari under Udalguri Civil Sub-Division.

A Bhutanese small sub-divisional administrative town called 'Daifam' is here known for the wine trades. It was a fastly growing town area in Bhutan but lost its pace after the violent democracy support movement started in the late eighties in Bhutan. Although, a very development faces a halt in the area a new dawn is expected after the creation of BTAD. The BTAD authority has taken interest to develop this area. The people prominently considered it as a suitable picnic spot for the new year.

The Hindu devotees visit the place in 'Makar Sankranti' where they take bath in the meeting point of three rivers and offer pujas in the Shiva temple.

According to proverbial tales there was a kunda where the devotees used to offer pujas. The fishes in this kunda used to take the rice thrown by the sacred devotees and sprinkle the holy water for peace while they used to avoid insure people in another tale it is said that the ~~extreme~~ devotees of Shiva. The Bodobs used to pray God performing kherai in the ancient ages. The God ~~them~~ realizes himself among the devotees and

The physiography of the Bhairabkunda is little than other hilly areas in Assam because it is situated with the wonderful sites of nature in the tri Junction of Bhutan Assam and Arunachal Pradesh, i.e. considered to be a God's gift for the human being. It is located at the northern end. Some 22 Km from the district headquarter of Udalguri Town. Also prominently known as important tourist place of Shiva for the pilgrims. The Shiva temple geographically lays into the Bhutanese territory but it is an important pilgrimage for the Indian visitors.

The Bhairabkunda is not only the meeting place of geographical borders but it is also for the rivers Jia Dhansiri Bhairavi and Daibam.

Bhairabkunda is a medium size village located in Udalguri District Assam with total 50 families residing. The Bhairabkunda village has population of 273 of which 144 are females while 129 are males as per population census ⁽⁴⁾ 2011.

Bhairabkunda known for its most scenic beauty. Situated at the tri-junction of Bhutan, Arunachal Pradesh and Assam and washed by the crystal blue water of Jampani, Dhansiri and Bhairavi. It has been famous as an enchanting picnic spot hemmed as it is on the three sides by lofty hills and completely by water of the three rivers.

From a very ancient time there was a route from Bhairabkunda between the hills of Arunachal Pradesh up to Tibet. This route reached the coast of the Mediterranean Sea joining Turkey and Afghanistan through India.

The area takes various huge and forms in characteristics with the beautiful nature all round. The seasonal changes have their exotic impact on the area as the mood of nature change.

Bhairabkunda is always the most exhilarating recharging the soul with the divine spirit.
